Celebrating a grant given in June by the First County Bank Foundation to the Women’s Mentoring Network were Gerard Edens Fleurizard, Sara Tucker, Lana Gifas and Sandra Greer.

The Women’s Mentoring Network, based in Stamford, was awarded a $2,500 grant from the First County Bank Foundation in June.

The network is a non-profit that provides workforce development and educational resources to low-income women and their families. Started in 1990, the Women’s Mentoring Network serves all of lower Fairfield County.

In addition to life-skills training and other services, the network also offers a First Generation Achievement Program to help prepare clients’ children for their futures.

The First County Bank Foundation is the philanthropic organization started in 2001 to support families in communities where the bank has branches, including Stamford,

Norwalk, Darien, Greenwich, New Canaan and Westport. More information:
