

First County Bank hosts investor events

First County Bank's Trust and Investment Services is hosting a series of seven investor presentations on how this recovery is different and what investors should do about it. Being held at bank branches throughout the county, the free events are open to the public and promise to provide new perspectives for investors to consider as they plan investment strategy over the short and long term.

"New and different investment strategies are needed in today's economic environment. Anyone who is interested in investment strategy and economic trends in this recovery will find this interactive presentation of value," said Paul Bubniak, vice president and trust officer at First County Bank. Online reservations are suggested and can be found at First County Bank Event RSVP.

Economist Donald Klepper-Smith and Bubniak are the presenters for this series. Klepper-Smith is chief economist and director of research for DataCore Partners LLC, a Connecticut-based professional services firm. A professional researcher for more than 20 years, he develops and directs strategic planning initiatives on behalf of clients in order to help them make better business decisions.

Klepper-Smith was previously chief economist and director with Scilla Dowling and Natarelli in New Haven, and also served as executive director of the New Haven Regional Data Cooperative, helping to grow Connecticut nonprofit institutions. In 1978, Klepper-Smith earned a master's degree in public administration from S.U.N.Y. at Stony Brook, N.Y., focusing on economics, econometric modeling, statistics and forecasting theory. In 1975, he earned a bachelor's degree in applied mathematics from Stony Brook.

Bubniak joined First County Bank in 2004 as a trust officer and now holds the position of vice president trust and investments. Previously, he was vice president and investment product manager, wealth management and trust for People's Bank. He earned a bachelor's degree in accounting from Queens College, City University of New York. Spending the past 25 years working with high net worth individuals in Connecticut, Bubniak specializes in investment management and estate planning.
